

Sunday Services Butterfield Canyon 7th Ward October 17, 2021

In revealing His Church's name to the Prophet Joseph Smith, the Savior declared, "For thus shall my church be called in the last days, even The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints" (Doctrine and Covenants 115:4). And to the Nephites, he said, "Ye shall call the church in my name," for "how be it my church save it be called in my name?" (3 Nephi 27:7, 8).

I testify with a Latter-day Saint named Tommie that when we use the full name of the Church, we are blessed and we bless others. Tommie told me, "As I share with others the blessings of being a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in a time when strife and fear prevail, I realize I am helping others know that there is refuge from the storm with disciples of Jesus Christ, who care for them and who follow Him."

"O God, Where Art Thou?" -- pages 179-182 & D&C 121-123

The bottom level of the county jail in Liberty, Missouri, was known as the dungeon. The walls were thick, the stone floor was cold and filthy, the food—what there was of it—was rotten, and the only light came from two narrow, iron-barred windows near the ceiling. This dungeon is where Joseph Smith and a few of his brethren spent most of their imprisonment—four frigid months during the winter of 1838–39—awaiting trial for charges of treason against the state of Missouri. During this time, Joseph was constantly receiving news about the suffering of the Saints. The peace and optimism of Far West had lasted only a few months, and now the Saints were homeless once again, driven into the wilderness in search of yet another place to start over—this time with their Prophet in prison.

No wonder Joseph Smith cried out, "O God, where art thou?" The answers he received, the "knowledge from heaven" that came "pouring down" in that miserable jail, demonstrate that although it may not always feel like it, God is never far away. No power can "stay the heavens," the Prophet learned. "God shall be with [His faithful Saints] forever and ever."
