Butterfield Canyon 7th Ward

November 28, 2021

The way to receive revelation from God has not changed from the days of Adam and Eve. It has been the same for all called servants of the Lord from the beginning to the present day. It is the same for you and me. It is always done by exercising faith.

The teenage Joseph Smith had faith sufficient to ask a question of God, believing that God would answer his heartfelt need. The answer that came changed the world. He wanted to know what church to join to be cleansed of sin. The answer he received encouraged him to keep asking ever-better questions and to act on the continuing flow of revelation that had just begun.

Your experience can possibly be similar in this conference. You have questions for which you seek answers. You have at least enough faith to hope that you will receive answers from the Lord through His servants. You will not have the opportunity to ask aloud for answers from the speakers, but you can ask your loving Father in prayer.

I know from experience that answers will come to fit your needs and your spiritual preparation. If you need an answer that is important to your eternal welfare or that of others, the answer is more likely to come. Yet even then, you may receive—as did Joseph Smith—the answer to be patient.

Home Study This Week: Class discussion on a following Sunday
“The Vision of the Redemption of the Dead” - pages 206-209 & D&C 137-138

The revelations recorded in [these sections] are separated by more than 80 years and 1,500 miles. Section 137 was received by the Prophet Joseph Smith in 1836 in the unfinished Kirtland Temple, and section 138 was received by Joseph F. Smith [...] in 1918 in Salt Lake City. But doctrinally, these two visions belong side by side. They both answer questions about the destiny of God's children in the next life. And both take on added depth of meaning when we consider the life experiences of the prophets who received them.

Joseph Smith's vision helped him understand the eternal destiny of his beloved brother Alvin, who had died six years before the authority to baptize was restored. [...] Joseph F. Smith's vision revealed glorious truths about the spirit world—surely a comforting revelation to one who had grieved the deaths of many close family members. [...]

Many questions that people have about life after death are answered in these revelations. [...] Together, they testify of “the great and wonderful love made manifest by the Father and the Son”. CFM-IF
