"The Lord has directed, Bring up your children in light and truth. To me, there is no more important human effort. Being a father or a mother is not only a great challenge; it is a divine calling. It is an effort requiring consecration. President David O. McKay (1873-1970) stated that being parents is the greatest trust that has been given to human beings."

--President James E Faust

"I will declare what He hath done for my Soul", Page 142

Psalms 49-51; 61-66; 69-72; 77-78; 85-86

The writers of the Psalms shared deeply personal feelings in their poetry. They wrote about feeling discouraged, afraid, and remorseful. At times, they even seemed to feel abandoned by God, and some psalms carry a tone of frustration or desperation. If you've ever had feelings like these, reading the Psalms can help you know that you aren't the only one. But you'll also find psalms that can encourage you when you're having such feelings, because the psalmists also praised the Lord for His goodness, marveled at His power, and rejoiced in His mercy. They knew that the world is burdened by evil and sin but that the Lord is "good, and ready to forgive" (Psalm 86:5). They understood that having faith in the Lord doesn't mean that you'll never struggle with anxiety, sin, or fear. It means that you know Who to turn to when you do.
