Come Follow Me - Old Testament: August 22 - 28

"Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord", Page 154

Psalms 102 - 103; 110; 116 - 119; 127 - 128; 135 - 139; 146 - 150

The traditional Jewish name for the book of Psalms is a Hebrew word that means "praises." That word, Tehillim, is also related to the exclamation "hallelujah" (meaning "praise Jehovah" or "praise the Lord"). If you had to choose one word to sum up the main message of the Psalms, "praise" would be a good choice. Some of the Psalms contain the direct invitation to "praise ye the Lord" (see especially Psalms 146–50), and all of them can inspire a feeling of worship and praise. The Psalms invite us to reflect on the Lord's power, on His mercy, and on the great things He has done. We can never repay Him for any of this, but we can praise Him for it. That praise may take different forms for different people—it may involve singing, praying, or bearing testimony. It often leads to a deeper commitment to the Lord and to following His teachings. Whatever "praise ye the Lord" means in your life, you can find more inspiration to do it as you read and ponder the Psalms.
